

A Directory of Dealers Specializing in Gold Bullion and Gold Coins

As the American dollar continues to depreciate, investing in gold stands out as the best option for financial security. But should you invest in gold coins, bullion, certificates or mining stocks? To help decide which method is best for you, do some research and then seek out a reputable gold dealer.

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC), the American Numismatic Association (ANA) and the Professional Numismatists Guild (PNG) offer the following advice:

- Use common sense when evaluating investment claims and do not rush into buying
- Know a dealer's reputation
- Gain familiarity with gold prices

The following list is a compilation of dealers specializing in gold bullion and gold coins (numismatic and semi-numismatic coins will have a premium, based on factors such as rarity or circulation, above the precious metal content), and is based on research including dealer associations and organizations. Membership information is noted where found. However, many reputable dealers choose not to join associations for various reasons. For this reason, use your best judgment based on the recommendations above when choosing a dealer right for you.
